

Custom Wall Units

Wall units are an important piece of furniture which stands against a wall and has numerous units. They are good for many things, including dining sets, art, jewelry, or clocks. They are very popular in many homes, and some companies offer wall units which can be custom built. Custom wall units are typically made out of wood, and the most popular wood used in their construction is maple, hardwood, or cherry. Metal wall units have also been built as well.

Wall units have many similarities with entertainment centers. They aid the homeowner in keeping their home organized and clutter free. Valuables which homeowners want to show off to their friends, family, or neighbors can be displayed in custom wall units. While most wall units are made out of either wood or metal, some hybrids exist which combine attributes from both. Custom wall units are also extremely popular with homeowners who want to save space.

There are seven primary designs which are used with wall units, though customers can choose any design they want. These seven designs are contemporary, artisan, global, country, rustic, traditional, and hip. Which of these designs you choose is a matter of personal taste. Each has its own special characteristics which separate it from the other designs. Contemporary custom wall units generally showcase a design which is similar to modern art. They tend to have very bright colors like red, and may have an unorthodox shape. These custom wall units are good for people who have modern styled homes.

Wall units which use an artisan base design avoid bright colors like those seen in contemporary wall units. Artisan custom wall units typically use the colors white, brown, or grey. They feature a design which is both elegant and sophisticated, and they will feature the box like shape which is found in most custom wall units. As their name suggests, artisan custom wall units typically feature a very artistic design. They will often have patterns which are much more intricate than other wall units.

Country custom wall units are those which are designed with the look and feel of traditional country homes. They are usually much larger than artisan and contemporary wall units, and feature multiple compartments. They also use colors which are natural, such as brown and tan. They utilize the standard rectangular shape which is seen in most wall units. These are good for someone who has a country home.

Global wall units have a look and feel which can match any culture or place. Unlike country or artisan wall units, there is no location where they will seem out of place. Global custom wall units have an international appeal, and many people will be attracted to them. They tend to use natural wood colors such as brown, though some may be darker in color. A few can also be seen which come in white. This design of wall units is excellent for people who want to add a global appeal to their home.

Traditional wall units have a classical look which is very antique. They have very intricate patterns, and can be compared to artisan wall units. They tend to be very large and have multiple doors in which objects can be placed. Traditional custom wall units are also excellent for adding books. The colors used for this design of wall units are medium brown, dark brown, and light brown. Some may be painted white as well. These are also some of the most expensive wall units available. Those made out of high quality materials such as mahogany can run as high as $15,000. These are good for people who have older homes.

Hip wall units are much cheaper, and use a very modern design. They don't have the intricate patterns often seen in artisan or traditional wall units, and utilize a simple design. They are also very light in weight, and are easy to carry in comparison to other wall units. Hip custom wall units are distinct because many of them have open backs, and this is different from other units.

Rustic wall units don't have much elegance, and they have a surface which is often coarse. While this design may not appeal to many homeowners, it is perfect for others. These custom wall units typically feature a very simple design, and because of this feature they have a price which is lower than other wall units. Very few rustic wall units feature wood colors such as brown or tan. Most feature a dark grey or white color. They may be made out of wood such as birch or poplar.

Just as not all wall units use the same base design, each is constructed using a different method. When the customer chooses the type of design they are looking for, the next thing they will want to pick is the type of construction method which is used to build it. Some custom wall units are designed using dust panels, while others may be constructed using veneer. The type of construction method you use should be based on your budget and tastes.

There are a limitless number of combinations which can be used when designing a wall unit. You can add drawers, cabinets, doors, or mirrors. Shelves or lights can also be added. Each wall unit can be built according to the specifications of the customer. Locks or additional storage areas can also be added. The price range for wall units starts at a little less than $800 and can go as high as $8,000 or more.

Wall units play an important role in the look and feel of your home. You can place trophies, dishes, or other objects in them which can be showcased to friends or families who visit your home. They are also capable of holding books and being used as a miniature library. How you choose to use your wall unit is up to you. The number of different uses and designs are endless. It is easy to spend a lot of money when building them, so it is important to set aside a budget and stick to it.